

The E-Mobility Equity Conference

A virtual conference on economic development opportunities and jobs created by new transportation technologies.

For Immediate Release

Oct. 23, 2020

Portland, Ore. – Forth and EVNoire are proud to present the National E-Mobility Equity Virtual Conference, November 12-13.

The conference will explore and facilitate real conversations about strategies and best practices for engaging diverse communities often hit worst and first by air pollution caused by transportation.

The conference will share current research and discuss case studies on economic development opportunities and jobs created by new transportation technologies, as well as efforts to ensure that frontline communities have access to these opportunities.

A lineup of over 50 speakers includes “the father of environmental justice,” Dr. Robert Bullard, Ingrid Fish of Portland’s Bureau of Planning and Sustainability, EVNoire’s Dr. Shelley Francis and Terry Travis, ICCT’s Anh Bui, The Greenlining Institute’s, Hana Creger, and Amy Atchley of Austin Energy, Forth’s Sabrina Cerquera, and many more.

The conference will include three tracks with interactive breakout sessions.

Policies and Programs

- How can specific barriers to electric mobility faced by historically underserved communities be overcome?
- What laws, regulations, and policies will be most effective?
- How can potentially competing policy objectives be balanced?
- What are good examples of equitable transportation policy?

Prosperity

- What economic development opportunities and jobs are being created by new transportation technologies?
- How can we ensure that frontline communities have access to these opportunities?
- Sharing and discussing current research, case studies and best practices.

Practice

- How can frontline communities be more effectively heard and engaged in new mobility?
- How can traditionally white-led organizations develop the capacity to authentically partner with equity organizations?
- These sessions will give participants a chance to strengthen their equity muscles.
